Food is converted into glucose (blood sugar)

As blood sugar levels rise, the pancreas makes insulin

Blood carries glucose and insulin to every cell in the body

Insulin acts like a key to ‘open’ the cells

Cells absorb glucose from the blood